FRANCE WARNS PEOPLE AGAINST OVERCONFIDENCE

Paris, Sept. 11.—General Gallieni, the military governor of Paris, admitted today that while the allies were steadily pushing the Germans back in a great battle east of Paris, the Germans are contesting every inch of ground and the outcome is still in doubt.

The government at Bordeaux cautions the people against overconfidence. These statements caused gloom here, but this feeling was lessened by reports that Frenchmen have again occupied Mulhausen and were successful at Chempemoux.

Wounded officers brought here say Germans have taken the offensive at some points of the center between Ezanne and Vitry. Fighting there is most ferocious.

New Head of the Roman Catholic Church

POPE BENEDICT XV.

The election of Cardinal Delfo Chiosso, Archbishop of Bologna, Italy, to succeed Pope Pius X, who died on August 20 last, came as a complete surprise to high church officials who took no part in the election. The name of the new pope had not been mentioned among those who made up the list of prominent candidates. It was only four months ago that the new Pontiff was elevated to the Cardinalate. Before becoming a prince of the church on May 30 last, Cardinal Delfo Chiosso was a Monsignor. He was made Archbishop of Bologna in December, 1907, succeeding the late Cardinal Domenico Bionvanti. He was born at Genoa in 1854 and was formerly assistant to Papal Secretary of State Merry Del Val. The American cardinals, Gibbons and O'Connell, who rushed to Rome when the date of the conclave was announced, arrived in time to take part in the balloting. Cardinal Farley was at Rome when the conclave opened. The new pope's first blessing was bestowed on the people of the Roman Catholic church throughout the world.

Pup Meets Nemesis In Miniature Dog Court House Officers Dance Mosquito Slap

R. H. Parker, the tailor, has a pup of which he is particularly fond, and the Strickland Piano Company has a miniature "dog" listening to "his master's voice" in a phonograph.

Now, pastboard dog and genuine puppy met in conflict dire today, but the miniature dog, with his age and superior attitude of wisdom, succeeded in bluffing the young canine, who barked loudly. With defiance, fear and hate showing and "howls" that rent the air, the puppy would face the miniature dog, but when somebody shook the pastboard at said puppy, the younger dog would flee like he was trying to outrun a German bullet.

No armistice was declared to bury the howls, but the battle ended with the evacuation of Mr. Puppy while the older "dog" still defends the fort, listening to "his master's voice."

An appeal will probably be made to Governor O'Neal to offer a reward for the capture of the guilty culprit who started the thing. The finger of suspicion points to several well known occupants of the court house, but it is probable that nothing will be given out before the grand jury meets.

The office of Justice T. W. Butler is sometimes besieged by hordes of mosquitoes that sweep down upon their unprepared victims, feasting on the spoils. Likewise is the office of every official, insofar as can be ascertained, who holds forth in the county's temple of justice.

Justice Butler admits the mosquito bites furiously, and he speaks from experience. It takes no hard fort, listening to "his master's voice," to inspire enough enthusiasm to make one dance the mosquito slap.

make one dance the mosquito slap—it comes naturally; just a contraction and relaxation of the muscles of the arms. The hand sweeps through the air towards the spot where Doctor Mosquito is making an incision. If there are enough mosquitoes, the dance is liable to last several minutes.

C. E. Harmon, register in chancery, who has an office upstairs, admits a disagreeable familiarity with mosquitoes, but at the same time he thinks he has a clue. He is contemplating telling the janitor of his clue, which he believes will lead to the discovery of the breeding place for mosquitoes around the court house. In the meantime all attempts to mediate have failed. The mosquito slap goes on.
